

David Coffey, M.D., is an Adult, Child & Adolescent Psychiatry specialist with a focus in Mood and Anxiety Disorders, ADHD, Eating Disorders, Learning Disabilities, Autism and Asperger's Disorders, Personality Disorders, and Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. He is an Assistant Clinical Professor at UCLA School of Medicine, Department of Psychiatry, and Executive Board Member of the Clinical Faculty Association in the UCLA Department of Psychiatry. Dr. Coffey graduated from the University of Pittsburgh, School of Medicine in 1991 and completed his fellowship from UCLA Neuropsychiatric Institute & Hospital, Child and Adolescent Psychiatry in 1996. One of his most recent publications includes, "Physicians Contribution to the Treatment of Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder & Learning Disabilities: Implications for Medication Management & Collaborative Treatment, Therapists Guide to Learning and Attention Disorders."